Collaborative Divorce™, a new form of marital dispute resolution, is now available in southeastern Pennsylvania. It is an integrated, cross-disciplinary team approach to solving divorce, property division, support and custody problems.

The essence of the process is a contractual commitment of the parties, their lawyers and other professionals not to litigate, and to provide full disclosure of assets and income. If no agreement is reached and either party institutes litigation, both attorneys must resign.

The team of professionals includes experienced domestic relations lawyers and coach\ therapists for each party, a single mutually-selected neutral financial advisor, and, if needed, a child specialist.

All professionals are trained in Collaborative Divorce™, a concept developed in California.

The collaborative divorce model differs from mediation and other forms of dispute resolution in the contractual commitment not to litigate and the availability and support of the cross-disciplinary team.

The collaborative divorce process focuses on reducing conflict between the participants enabling them to engage in an open, honest process to end their marriage, resolve their family-related conflicts and support their children's welfare.
